How HITN Employees Stay Energetic and Build Relationships

HITN's employees are always looking for new ways to maintain their energy levels and build relationships at work thru sports. This time, they played a series of basketball games at the John Jay School for Law located in Brooklyn. The games were extremely competitive. Unfortunately, HITN's team lost the series by a narrow margin. Nonetheless, everyone had a great time and are looking forward to next year's games.

"It's always enjoyable to play basketball with my colleagues," said one employee. "We get to know each other better and it's a great way to relieve stress."

Another added, "I love how basketball requires teamwork. It's a great opportunity to work on our communication skills while also getting some exercise."

Everyone at HITN is looking forward to next year's games and is determined to win the series. Go team!
